GREECE HOPES FOR THE BEST. King George, in his speech at the opening of the Chamber of Deputies at Athens, said that negotiations were progressing between Greece and Turkey, aided by the co-operation of Europe, and were shortly expected to terminate favorably. A peaceful solution, he said, would be advantageous to both countries, but it was necessary, in order to maintain the army in an effective condition, to continue the military preparations, because strength greatly regulated the relations between nations. Bills will be presented concerning the army and navy.

IRELAND'S HOUR OF NEED.

Sir Stafford Northcote, Chancellor of the Exshequer, in answering a letter calling his attention to the popular distress in the southwest of Ireland and suggesting immediate action by the government in providing work for the employment of the people, says that he sympathizes with the people, but can only refer them to the Irish Executive He adds that direct interposition by the government would be open to great abuse. EGYPT AND THE POWERS.

The Paris correspondent of the Manchester Guardian says:—"It is now certain that Austria has refused to sanction the Anglo-French scheme for the liquidation of the Egyptian floating debt. It appears that England had taken an engagement with Austria to abide by her decision in the matter which produces here much discontent and dis-trust of England's intention to abide by the Angle-French intervention. These annoyances are unfortunate, especially in the present juncture, when Frenchmen jealously watch the English movements and are apt to misinterpret every act against French policy as an advance

PROGRESS OF THE SPANISH PLOODS

Since yesterday the principal railroad lines of Arragon, Catalonia and Navarre have been interrupted by gales and floods, chiefly on the valley of the Ebro, where the water has risen several metres above the ordinary level and destroyed the line between Saragossa and Catalonia for fifteen miles, flooded the valley of Tortosa, carried away houses, mills and bridges and caused damage to the extent of several millions of pesetas. In Upper Arragon, near Huesea, the River Alcandre invaded several villages, cut the rallway embankment and carried away an iron bridge at Sarinena. Tele graphic communication is very irregular to-day, but the Governors of Malaga and Almeria report that the gale extended over the whole of Andalusia and caused a very disastrous flood in the rural districts and in the town of Malaga. The River Almanzora flooded its valley and destroyed forty houses. Sixty persons were drowned.

CARDINALI, THE CIRCUS RIDER.

END OF AN ITALIAN CAUSE CELEBRE-THE LATEST TRAGEDY FROM THE COUNTRY OF

DRAMATIC CRIMES --- A MODERN MESSALINA. [BY CABLE TO THE HERALD.]

ROME, Nov. 1, 1879.

After a long trial Cardinali and his mistress, Raffa-slia Sarsceni, the widow of Captain Padda, have been found guilty. Cardinali was convicted of the murder of Captain Fadda and sentenced to death. The woman, Saraceni, was convicted of complicity before the fact in the murder and sentenced to hard labor for life. [Captain Giovanni Fadda, of the Thirty-second Italian infantry, was murdered in Rome. He lived in the Via della Marmo-rella, a quiet, old fachioned street, that had as when, on October 6, 1878, a man was seen to stagger, half dressed, from a house, to make a few unto fall dead in a pool of his own blood. Instantly a ing on every balcony, saw a big, strapping fellow fighting in the midst of a throng of workmen and police. He was captured after desperate resistance. At the station they knew him at once. It was Cardinali, the circus rider. He was as handsome and well built a man as modern Rome could produce. He was in the front rank of his profession. He had performed with most of the companies that were wont in site the Collseum, and whether as jongleur in a small troupe or as bareback rider in Guillaume's, the spectators had never failed to notice his spler did proportions, perfect as those of an ancient gladiator. Latterly he had started a circus on his own account and, in the course of his wanderings, had given a performance at the Neapolitan town of Cassano. Among the audience on that occasion was a certain lady of fashion, the Siguera Rafaella Saraceni, who had been discarded by her husband, Captain Fadda, and was living with her mother. The handsome circus rider had no sooner appeared in the ring than the lady of fashion was infatuated. It is needless to lady of fashion was infatuated. It is needless to follow the course of her base intrigue. She was, a well born woman and Cardinali's vanity was tickled. She easily persuaded him to keep his circus for another week at Cassano come what might, she would marry him. The diffi-culty was her husband. "Cospetto!" said Cardinali, "we'll make short work of him." There were in his company three people who were devoted to him.

One was Enrichetta Carrozza, his leading equestrienne, who had borne him two children and whom he bullied and beat; another was Carluccio, the clown, and the third, De Luca, the ringmaster. He at first selected the clown to murder Captain Padda, but Carluccio's courage failed. So Enrichetta was left at Cassano to console Rafaella for the rider's absence, and Cardinali set off with his ringmaster for Rome, awaggering in his cups at a hostelry that a great lady had given him her love, and that he was going to murder her hus-band. He took rooms in the Via della Marmorella, from which he could watch the movements of his victim. He dictated to De Luca a letter purporting to be written by a married Roman lady to Captain Fadda and saying:-"I pray you to discontinue your visits. My husband knows all. I am in hourly dread lest he should kill us both." He then called at the Captain's house, got his servant out of the way on some errand, crept up behind him as he wrote and stabbed him to the heart. His stiletto was found on the floor. side it was De Luca's letter, craftily intended to divert suspicion. On the table, spotted with blood, was a copy of verses which the Captain had been writing. There were fifteen stanzas, bitterly lamenting Rafaella's infidelity. Do Luca was arrested and died of consumption in jail. Rafaella was placed on trial with Cardinali. The poor drudge Enrichetts was speedily acquitted. Rome flocked daily to hear the case. Nothing had for years excited more interest, and certainly no trial had ever shown more plainly that in modern Italian life there still may be found those vices which Juvenal scourged in ancient Rome.]

EXTENSIVE FIRE IN PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 1, 1879. About half-past eight o'clock this evening a fire which proved very disastrous broke out in the large brick storage house Nos. 1,731 and 1,733 Market street, occupied by flour and grain commission merchants. building covered 84 by 180 feet, and was four stories high. The storage warehouse on the the second, third and fourth doors was managed by Mr. Nathan Brooke, who rented the storage, and Brooke & Harper, Robert Fletcher and Pugh & Kirk. Brooke & Harper, Robert Fletcher and Pugh & Kirk. These dealers had offices on the first floor. The building was reduced to a wreck the roof of the freight depot of the Westchester Railroad was crushed in and a stable back on Jones street was entirely destroyed. Loaded freight cars from the railroad depot had been hauled only a few moments before the fire. The total loss by the fire is over $30,000, and is said to be pretty fully covered by insurance. By the falling of a wall three firemen, Edward Connor, Charles Alcock and William Staggart, were severely injured. The Market street pottery of Galloway & Graff, adjoining the warehouse, was damaged in the rear by the falling of a wall. Engine No. 17 has been put in service too close to the birning building, and had to be abandoned by the firemen by reason of the intense heat. By the falling of a portion of the intense heat. By the falling of a portion of the front wall the engine was considerably wrecked. The fire originated in the engine room.

AMUSEMENTS.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC-"CARMEN." A matinée performance of "Carmen" was given at the Academy of Music yesterday with the same artists in the principal parts who were heard on the former production of the opera a few nights since. The occasion was chiefly noticeable as being the second appearance of Mme. Dolaro, and in her rendering of the part yesterday she simply confirmed the impression she made on her debut. Relieved of the nervousness manifest on Monday last, she improved to a certain degree upon her first efforts; her voice was steadier, her tones fuller and rounder, her acting was easier and her by-play more detailed and more effective, but she still failed to bring out forcibly the striking points of the part to bring out forcibly the striking points of the part of Carmen, and the character lacked as before, breatth of conception, boldness of outline and brilliancy of coloring. It was—owing to the combined effects of a sweet voice, a pleasant exterior and quiet methods—a mild, picturesque and exceedingly pretty Carmen, but it was not the Carmen of bizet. Mine. Dolaro is very charming in her way, and can infuse a great deal of feeling into her singing and much excellence into her acting, but she is not equal to the full requirements of the rôle as it is writton. She produces a Carmen of her own that is delightful to look upon and pleasant to listen to, but to make it harmonious to words and music we must accept a new view of the picture. The opera glasses must be reversed, as it were; one must be content with lessened effects, though as charming a picture is viewed.

Mile. Valleria impressed the audience most agreeably with her vocalization and acting, and Campanini and Del Puente repeated—in fact, all three repeated the full, earlier successes.

Mr. Conrad Behrens, one of the bassi profundi of Colonel Mapleson's opera company, ar-rived at the Westminster Hetel yesterday. He said they had a stormy passage and several times during the voyage almost gave up hope of reaching here. Mr. Behrens has just concluded a long Continental tour made in the company of Muse. Trobelli, and be comes to the Academy of Music to take the place of Mr. David, who is going back to Her Majesty's Theatre.

At the Germania Theatre Manager Neuendorff produced several pieces last week, among them "A Kiss in the Dark," which proved quite a treat, being replete with fun and merriment. This week's reper-toure will consist of "Die Herren Eltern" ("Our Boys") and L'Arronge's newest comedy in four acts, entitled "Wohlthatige Frauen" ("Benev-olent Women"). The reduction of prices, so as to terially increased the patronage of the Germania, Signor Campanini writes to say that "the cuts in tener part of 'Linda' were not made in order to spare him for the Brooklyn performance. Generally in Europe the duetto in the second act is left out in order to give rest to the prima donna, who has to sing five airs in this act. And as to the duet in the last act, it is a matter of choice (according to custom) with the prima donna to sing that or some other air, a privilege with which the tenor does not like to interfere." Hence the intro-duction of "L'Incontro," a favorite composition of Signor Arditi, the masstro of the orchestra.

"Der Seecadet," Genée's latest and best operetta, in three acts, was brought out last Monday at the Thatis Theatre, not only in a handsome and artistic manner as far as scenery and costumes are concerned, but with a very strong and brilliant cast. In this was included Miss Mathilde Cottrelly as Frauchette Michel (the cadet). Miss Emma Fie bach (Queen of Portugal), Mr. Adolfi (a Brazilian), Mr. Schnell (as Fleet Admiral), &c. The music is replete with sweet morceaux. To-morrow evening Miss Magda Irschik, a celebrated German tragé-dienne, will make her début in this country at the

In a brief conversation with Mr. Manleson vester day he expressed the opinion that no further trouble would be experienced on account of his orchestra Its respective members thoroughly understand the situation, and, having signed a contract, propose to abide by its conditions, unless interrupted by the union to which they belong. It is probable, however, that the names of the leading members in the revolt will be posted before the principal managers of the city and country, and they will have a chance to starve awhile. People who dishonor their signatures to a contract deserve no favor, and not all the "society rules in Christendom can make them respectable.

"Only standing room" is the legend one sees at the Union Square Theatre after eight o'clock. "French Flats" have an undoubted draught power. Some of the character acting in the play is excellent, notably that of Mr. J. B. Polk, "the tenor" who imitates Brignoli so well; Mr. Tom Morris, the deaf old gentleman, and Mr. Stoddart. It is well worth night's sitting by all who would enjoy a hearty laugh. In this connection the following statistics will be interesting to playgoers and managers:— Receipts of the first nine nights of the "Two Or-phans," $7,457; do. do. "Led Astray," $7,617; do. do. "Miss Multon," $8,489 25; "Celebrated Case," $8,035; "Banker's Daughter," $7,385 75, and "French Flats," $8,513 25. It would be interesting to indicate the receipts each night, but we have not the

MAPLESON'S TERROR.

SOME ACCOUNT OF THE MUSICAL UNION AND WHAT THE ORGANIZATION HAS DONE.

The recent difficulty between the gallant com mander-in-chief of the Academy of Music and his troops, or so many of them as compose the orchestra, has brought prominently into notice a fact not very well known hitherto to the general public-viz., the existence of the Musical Mutual Protective Union, an organization as nearly as possible on the plan of the trades unions that have so long been a terror to capitalists. The union is a strong one in influence agers before Colonel Mapleson's difficulty, there has been no effectual stand made against it, and it is said to be stronger than ever to-day. Musical Union has nothing to do with the quarrel between Mr. Mapleson and his orchestra, yet it is certain, from a conversation had with a prominent officer of the union by a HERALD reporter, that this is not strictly correct. On the contrary, a letter from the union or officers representing it was the original cause of the strike. Mr. Mapleson claims that he is in corre-spondence with theatre managers and representaand New York who propose to refuse playment hereafter to the musicians have broken their contracts, and he proposes it he has further trouble after the settling of the test case between himself and his "flute," to furnish the list of his orchestra to other managers and he has reason to believe that they will combin against these men and in that way against the de furnish the list of his orchestra to other managers, and he has reason to believe that they will combine against these men and in that way against the demands of the union. He says, moreover, that he has learned that there are fifty good musicians in New York who do not belong to the union.

The UNIOS A STRONG ONE.

This latter statement is doubted by the members of the union, with several of whom the writer conversed inst evening, and their opinion seems to be upheld by the fact that hitherto the union has been able to dictate its own terms of payment. By so dictating them they have occasioned the only complaint made naginst them, so far as ceuid be learned. As has been stated in the Heratid the terms demanded for orchestra performers is $35 a week for first class performers and $30 a week for second class. These two classes are the 'only distinctions made by the union.

The union itself is 1,400 strong and its members say comprise all, or almost all, the good musicians of the 2,300 professionals in the c.ty. It was started some sixteen years ago and originally consisted of forty-five numbers. "For a long time," sad one of the forty-five, "we were laughed at by the more timid men, who stayed away. But at length they came to see that while they worked for less pay than we would and thereby got more work than we did, we, by adhering to our scale of prices, made more money than they did. So, one by one they came in, and we now have the cream of the profession, so that a man who wants a good orchestra cannot get one without coming to us. We are a benevolent association, and by paying fifty cents a quarter a nussician becomes entitled to the benefits of the union, which are considerable. If a man talls and breaks his leg or his arm, we give him $25 or $50, or more, according to the respect of the committee. The largest sum we have paid to a diabled member was $500 to one Schmidt, who lost his eyesight. Then we sent $500 to the sufferers from the Chicago fire, and we gave $500 to the Suffers from the Avandole dissis

Mapleson difficulty, and that the union had nothing to do with it; and he also expressed the hope that it would all be settled peacefully.

SCHNAPPS is a remedy in chronic catarrh complaints

I take great pleasure in bearing highly creditable testimony to its officacy as a remedial agent in the diseases for which you recommend it. Having a natural tendency to the nucous surfaces, with a slight degree of stimulation, I regard it as one of the most important remedies of chronic catarrhal affections. With much respect, your obedient servant, CHAS, A. LEAS, M. D., New York,
